THE LIONS OF NEW ORLEANS.

For the Union and American.] The lions of this place are worthy of marked attention. They consist chiefly of railroads, hotels, theatres, billiard saloons, churches, great buildings, fancy stores, parks, canals, generals, editors

When the city railroad system is complete it will be of about one hundred miles extent. The cars are elegant and always crowded. Except the two-story cars, they are all drawn by mules, longlegged mules, that move in a sweeping trot over perfectly level streets paved with flat blocks of granite, or with heavy plank. A box, a simple hours in each day.

The parks with their green sward, their bloom, their groves of lofty evergreens, their seats, their clean walks, their groups of sporting children, their crowds of promenaders and evening parties them useful and comfortable, and they are usually thronged with worshippers. Dr. Palmer's church on Lafayette square takes the lead of all in style, convenience, locality and congregation. The hotels, many of them, rank as of the first order in any country, the St. Charles being foremost of all hotels in the world. Travellers who but must make your State bankrupt. visited nearly all the great capitals on our globe, inve repeatedly assured me, that if it has equals in some things, yet, as a whole, it is superior to any other that can be named. The largest billiard saloon in the world has been recently opened on Canal and St. Charles streets, It has twenty-four tables and is always thronged. The players gay for the use of tables and there is no more of gambling connected with them, than with ball playing. Of theatres the St. Charles, I learn, has prefer ence at times; but many of the places of amuse ment are great humburs. The Anatomical Museum should be visited by all young men who go to the city before they go elsewhere. The new iran building which covers a city square is the finest house on existence. Arabeson in style, and of three lefty stories in height, it has a richness of ornament and grace of proportion which with its snowy whiteness, make it "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." It was cast at Hol ly Springs; is all of solid fron; was built by the Belgian Cougal; was sold for debt; and is to b used altogether as a evockery store, The mannereth funcy stores on Canal street as

The editors here are of the first case, the sum of the South does not dissipate intellect as some philosophers affirm, the powerful press of the city proxing the contrary.

The ladios of this city are generally of fine form and elegant scature. Viscatiy of expression, with sweetness and grace of manner, and all that constitutes taste and style and delicacy, meet and Orleans is one of the most fascinating cities merica.

Charksville, April 30, 1866,-To the Citizens of Robertson, Montgomery and Stew not constitut? As soon as notified of my election, I immediately repaired to Nashville, and on the 5th of April, presented to the Senate the certificate of my election, as required by law, and asked to be admitted to my seat, that I might perform the duties that by the sword. It would seem but just you expected of me. There was no other and proper that those who entertain such claimant for the position, and no exception taken to the returns of the sheriffs and cerdifficates of my election. I was informed, by the Speaker, that the Senate had adopted a rule to do no business without a quorum. In vain I urged upon him that the admission of new members was not a part of the business of the Senate requiring a quorum that the organization of the Senate by the admission of new members was necessary before a quorum could be formed—that such was the practice in all legislative bodiesthat, in Congress, members were admitted | Congress, for the restoration of the States and qualified upon production of a certificate of election, and sometimes even upon must soon be settled, as I confidently bepublication in the newspapers, giving the election of applicant; and that the Senate, now in session, had been organized on the resentment of the certificates of election.

ing large expenditures, which must necessaly produce heavy taxation. Taxation without representation is a badge of slavery The bill now pending before the legislature, and will probably become a law, will exclude from the ballot-box nineteen-twentieths of the people, if not more. The act of the 5th of June last, did not exclude a sufficient number of voters to secure the success box, is the only fare collector, the honesty of all of the Radical party, and therefore a new travellers being assumed. Here you get the law more restrictive is demanded, and so cheapest and best riding in the world for twenty | framed as to place in the hands of the Governor the power to exclude every man who will not vote the ticket favored by him. the State assume the payment of all the losses of the Union men, by giving the bonds

They have another bill pending, making of loungers, give health and gladness to the peo- of the State, payable in thirty years, with six per cent interest, which it is estimated The churches are numerous and surpassingly will create a debt from twenty to fifty milelegant. No pains have been spared to make lions of dollars, and without any of the guards and restrictions which is so necessary to protect the interests of the State against fraudulent claimants. The adoption of these two measures, carried into effect, will not only deprive you of your most valued constitutional rights, Other measures, of a most pernicio character, are pending before that body which I cannot point out in such an addres as this, which will involve expenditures to in amount heretofore unknown in this State, and a taxation never dreamed of by my of her citizens. The Government of Tennessee, as adnistered by the present incumbents, is the ost detestable oligarchy of modern times, and conducted without the least regard to the cardinal principles upon which our free institutions were originally based.

Its organization took place in time of war tended, no doubt honestly, to give aid to the United States in the great struggle for existence, and will therefore furnish some excuse for the irregularities in getting it up and for its acts during the war; but that any citizen, thus selected, after the war ha ended, should still persist in their usurpa tions, sticking to the places assigned then and legislating against the known wishes o such a majority of the people, exhibits an ambition for office, a selfishness and hardihood not often met with in civilized commi nities. To misrepresent any people, know ingly, has been, heretofore, always considered a degrdaation to which no man, having proper self-respect, would submit. Correct principles, self-respect, duty to the people as well as themselves, should have induced them, at the close of the war, to have surrendered their usurped, ill-gotten power, to the people to whom it belonged, which would have been followed by peace; harmony and prosperity at home. If such a course could now be adopted, and the act of disfranchisement repealed and a conciliatory course practiced by those now in power, the State would be as peacetal and orderly as at any other period in our history. It is not to be expected that the ns will quietly submit to be governed, even wisely and justly by such a minority, especially if obtained from military authory without their consent, or getting control f the State by legislative tricks and con-

The acts of our State Government say to the world, that nineteen-twentieths of our people are traitors to their country, unfit for self-government, and must be subjected to sentiments, should abandon such traitorous neighbors, and seek a home with more genial spirits among the Yankees.

To be thus deprived of the invaluable right of self-government; to have such unjust burthens imposed on us, by men who are not our representatives, would seem to demand of us prompt and speedy action for our own relief, as well as the suitable punshment of those who have dared to usurp our rights. But the contest now going or at Washington, between the President and and the rights of the people, and which
